The committee approved three articles. Article 1 charges the President with engaging in a course of conduct that produced the Watergate cover-up. Article-2 accuses him of misusing executive powers to violate citizens' rights. Article 3 contains the deflance-of-subpoens charge.

The third article was approved by a narrow vote in the committee and some Democrats fear that the full House will not vote to retain it. Some of them had planned to assure passage of the charge by striking jost the third article and adding it by amendment to Article 1. That could not be done under the closed rule generally agreed on today.

Civil Rights Restored

Pre-Coup Greek Constitution Is Reinstated by Caramanlis

By Steven V. Roberts

ATHENS, Aug. 1 (NYT).—Greece took another big step toward the restoration of democracy tonight when it reinstituted the constitution that had been in force before the military coun of 1967. "All civil rights have been restored," declared Panayotic Lain, brias, under secretary for press and information. The provisions of the constitution relating to the monarchy were temporarily suspended, however, and all vested in the President. The decision on whether to recall King Constantine is expected to be made ultimately by the Greek people, either through a referendum or a constituent assembly. The new civilian government of

UN Council Expands the Role Of Cyprus Peace-Keeping Unit

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Aug. 1.—The Security Council today dopted a resolution aimed at enlarging the role of the UN peace-keeping mission on Cyprus.

The vote was 12-0, with the Soviet Union and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic ab-staining and China not partici-

The resolution was similar to one which was vetoed last night by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik, who angrily protested that the council had denied him time to seek instructions from Moscow. The resolution authorizes UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to make an evaluation of the role prescribed for the UN force by the cease-fire and disengagement agreement signed in Geneva Tuesday by Turkey, Greece and Britain.

The vote today followed consultations among Mr. Waldheim and members of the 15-nation council, including Mr. Malik, who had emphasized yesterday that he was casting his veto to protest the procedure rather than the terms of the resolution.

U.S. Ambassador John Scali aid: "I am glad we have done today what we should have done yesterday. We were concerned that the delay offered opportu-nity for further violence, but we can now congratulate ourselves that the Security Council has acted as it should in a crisis."

Uganda on Alert, Sends Troops to Tanzania Border

NAIROBI, Aug. 1 (AP).— Uganda announced today a mili-tary alert and said that it is moving troops to the Tanzanian border, Radio Uganda sald.

The broadcast, monitored here, also accused Tanzania of preparing to invade Uganda. The broadcast said the decision was made at an emergency meeting of the Uganda Defense Council, headed by President Idi Amin. Tha radio, quoting a military spokesman, said several more Tanzanian "spies" had been arrested. It accused Tanzania of sending "agents to spy on Ugandan military installations."

The council ordered Uganda's armed forces to go on the alert in preparation for an invasion of northern Tanzania. Elaboratiog on a possible pre-emptive strike, the military spokesman said, "It might be necessary for Uganda to extend her southern border to the Kagera River, 20 miles inside Tanzania.

Sources in the Ugandan capital of Kampala reported about 4,000 Ugandan troops were already in position along the 100-mile border heen reinforced in the last few days with tanks.

The fighting centered on La-pithos, 9 miles west of Kyrenia and at the edge of an expanding Turkish bridgehead on the island's north coast.

Reporters who visited the battle. area this morning reported that the Greek Cypriot National Guard had retreated to the edge of Lapithos and that firing in-cressed during the morning as Turkish forces moved down the slopes, apparently intending to occupy Lapithos. In Nicosia, United Nations spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar said at a press briefing that artillery and mortar fire broke out late this morning just over a mile west of Lapithos.

That was as far west of Kyrenia as fighting had been reported since the Turkish landing July 20. Both Lapithos and Karavas, seven miles west of Kyrenia, were shelled and overrun yesterday.

Meanwhile Turkish Army commanders charged that Greek Cypriot soldiers had disguised themselves in UN uniforms to gather intelligence and attack the invasion force.

Maj. Atilia Erden, a staff officer at Turkish headquarters here, said the Greek Cypriots' use of UN uniforms was "why we have had to take certain precau-

The UN gear was new and did not appear to have been used. Maj. Erdem, admitting that, said: "We don't know how many uniforms and flags like this are being used by Greek Cyprict forces all over the island. We have to be careful."

Each side blamed the other for starting the clash, the UN spokesman said. Mr. Stajduhar said UN peace-keeping soldiers had observed and reported cease-fire violations but were unable to determine who initiated them.

Fresh troops, trucks, anti-aircraft artillery and tanks arrived at the vast Turkish headquarters here. Cargo vessels and Turkish naval landing craft bustled along the north coast.

Independent diplomatic sources said the Turkish military huildup was continuing despite the Geneva accord. They estimated the Turks now have more than 40,000 troops on the island. Mr. Stajduhar said the 3,577 the rich and the poor. He was also reported to have said that be has accepted the policy of his predecessor, con-tained in a white paper issued last April, and that he would work toward implementing social, economic, administrative, judicial and land reforms contained in the white paper.

UN troops on the island had not established huffer zones between Turkish and Greek Cypriot forces because "we are awaiting instructions from [the] Secretary-General [Kurt Waldheim] in New York before moving those troops.

Mr. Endaikatchew was fired by the armed forces 10 days ago for failing to implement reforms contained in the white paper. He was also accused of siding with "his former colleagues and close relatives under detention," and of "trying to create dissent among the armed forces.'

Saigon Fears Two Outposts Lost to N. Vietnamese Forces

DANANG, South Vietnam, Aug. 1 AP .- North Vietnamese forces apparently overran two government positions today near Que Son one of four district capitals being threatened in the northern coastal region below Danang.

The two posts southwest of Que Son were attacked about hour apart. One was manned by 400 men and the other by about 100. Radio contact was lost with both, and there was no word of the garrisons.

The Salgon command reported that attacks continued around Thuong Duc. Duc Duc and Dai Loc, the three other besieged district towns near Danang. North Vietnamese and Viet Cong gunners poured more than 400 rocket and mortar shells into government positions, killing eight government soldiers and wounding 33, the command said.

EEC Farm Aide Sees Prices Of Meat, Bread Rising in '75

By David Hawnith

Common Market housewives were today urged by the European Economic Community Agriculture Commissioner, Pierre Lardinois, to buy as many basic foodstuffs, such as meat and bread, as they could afford as a hedge against greatly increased prices next year. Describing his recommendation as "operation squirrel," Mr. Lardinois predicted that this year's beet surplus in the community would soon give way to a serious short-age. He said that, faced with rising feed grain costs, farmers would be forced to switch their production into other sectors and that this would create a beef shortage. Pig and poultry farmers will face similar difficulties next year and the price of all these products will consequently soar, be said.

The commissioner clearly wants consumers to buy as much beef as possible to prevent the EEC's beef mountain"-now standing at 135,000 tons-from growing. Great Shortages

Despite his warning that "we shall probably face great short-ages of beel next year," few officials bere believe that many consumers are able to take part in "operation squirrel."

His comments were also seen by diplomats here as the source of possible political embarrassment in the EEC member countries. The diplomats fear that the comments could be interpreted by consumers as a confession of failure on the community's part if the only aptidote to rising prices is a program of boarding.

In a wide-ranging press conference, Mr. Lardinois admitted that the recent protests by farmers in France. But legal opinions dating back to 1961 indicate that the IRS considered any White House request to be proper. A memo-randum written by President John Kennedy's tax commissione Mortimer Caplin, in May, 1961, concluded that the tax code permits the White House to see the return of any taxpayer.

That view was reaffirmed by

IRS lawyers in both the Johnson and Nixon administrations. According to former Assistant IRS Commissioner Vernon Acree, whom White House investigator Jack Canlfield identified as his main source of tax information the IRS employed increasingly casual procedures for passing tax records to the White House begirming in the early 1960s.

House Passes School Bill, Busing Limit

By Richard L. Madden

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (NYT). The House of Representatives, by a surprisingly large margin, approved yesterday a major educa-tion bill containing a compromise provision aimed at limiting the busing of children to achieve school desegregation.

The vote was 323 to 63 on the bill, which now goes to President

In the past, Mr. Nixon has endorsed stronger anti-busing curbs repeatedly passed by the House, but he has taken no position on the compromise measure, according to the bill's sponsors.

It was apparent that the Subanning the busing of children across school district lines for desegregation in Detroit had made it easier for the House to accept the compromise version drafted earlier this month by

Senate-House conferees. Court's Infinence

The 5-to-4 court ruling "must have had an important psychological impact," said Rep. John Brademas. D-Ind., one of the conferees on the measure He said he hoped that the coargin of the vote, more than the two-thirds that is needed lo override a veto, would "encourage the President to sign it."

Although opponents argued that the anti-busing restrictions previously passed by the House had been weakened too much by the conferees, Rep. Carl Perkins, a Kentucky Democrat and floor manager of the bill told the

"You have more anti-busing provisions in this bill than you have ever had in the history of the Congress."

Key Clause

The key section of the bill would bar the federal courts from ordering the husing of children beyond the school closest or nextclosest to their homes for desegregation, except in instances where the courts determined that such busing was required to pro-tect the constitutional rights of minority-group children.

The House in March passed a flat prohibition against busing for desegregation and three times after that the House instructed its conferees to stand firm against the conferees from the Senate. which had passed a milder busing

Labor's Seeds of Discontent

Labor government, it would seem that Anthony Wedgwood Benn was stating a platform plank for an autumn election, rather than a legislative proposal, when he told Parliament of the cabinet's plans to nationalize the nation's shipbuilding industry. And the most immediate effect, apart from some joyous thunder on the left, was a very substantial fall in stock prices on the London market

It is easy enough, and correct enough, to see this drop on the exchange as a reflection of worries by the private owners of British industry that they would have to share this ownership with the rest of their countrymen, should Labor, in its present mood, win a majority next time around at the polis. But there is another factor, and one that is more significant, in the doubts created by Mr. Benn's announcement.

The British economy is in a hazardous state-for reasons that prevail, in varying degrees, in most other industrialized nations. British shipbuilding, in a laud where that trade has been of world importance since the time of the Spanish Armada, is in a specially poor position in the global market, and if any radical measures to improve it could be successful, the British would have reason Given the minority position of Britain's to applaud. But is government ownership and operation of the yards such a step?

> What Britain needs, above all, are superior products and services that can be sold competitively to the world at farge. It needs them because it must use the income to buy food and other materials that the island kingdom cannot produce in sufficient quantity to sustain its population and their factories. Will nationalization of another segment of industry do that? It can hardly reduce costs. If Britain's nationalized coal is any criterion; it has not been notable in the success of Britain's rivals in building shins. and selling them, or using them in world transportation.

And, in the meantime, the threat of nationalization hangs over private investment in Britain, just as it has hung over the shipyards for many years. There is a curious reminder in the Labor program of the retired British admiral in the days of sail who scattered acorns on his walks about his estate, so that the Royal Navy might have oak for its ships-and who died before those oaks, reaching matority, found their place had been taken by iron. But the seeds Mr. Benn is scattering may also prove valueless when they come of age. They are presently seeds of discontent in a Britain that needs both unity and efficiency for sur-

High-Level U.S. Crime Wave

The indictment of John Connally, former governor of Texas and fater secretary of the treasury, brought to a sensational end a month in which an astonishing number of high public figures bave been subjected to the processes of the law. Sen. Edward Gurney of Florida was indicted on charges of bribery and conspiracy, California's Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was convicted of perjury. Rep. Frank Brasco of New York of peddling his influence for money. In the same short span, Otto Kerner, once governor of Illinois and until a few days ago a judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, started a three-year prison sentence for assorted crimes connected with the taking of a bribe. so did his former director of state revenue.

For the most part, this sad roster is only indirectly or not at all connected with Watergate. That complex skein has already entangled three other former cabinet officers, nearly a score of White House aides and advisers and now confronts the President himself with the likely possibility of impeachment—a fate that his first vice-president escaped only by resigning and pleading guilty to one charge out of many which the government was preparing to press.

This quick succession of vigorous prosecutions undercuts the contention that the rich and influential can easily escape the law. In spite of some plea bargaining (which, however regrettable, goes on in every criminal court in the land), the rate of convictions for highly-placed politicians has been at least as high as that for run-of-the-mill muggers-and the percentage of those freed on probation considerably fower,

Nevertheless, the sense of a spreading corruption at this high level of American life is intolerable. As with crime on any other level, it calls not merely for punishing the guilty but for getting at the cause and if possible finding a cure.

To an appreciable extent, both are obvious. The cause in large part is to be found in the role of money in the political process. Even when the feverishly rising costs of running for public office are not a direct factor, the very machinery of financing campaigns invites corruption and provides a channel for personal bribery. The cure is a drastic reform of the laws governing campaign finance - with heavy emphasis on public

If Congress is serious about restoring taltb in the system and lifting the public morale, it has in such pending legislation the instrument it needs. The feaders of the House of Representatives have only to put it on the calendar.

Hooverian Nixonomics

Remembering his own uncertainty about what to do in the midst of worsening depressloo, President Herbert Hoover later wrote: "No President before had ever believed there was a governmental responsibility in such cases. No matter what the urging on previous occasions, Presidents steadfastly had maintained that the federal government was apart from such eruptions: they had always been left to blow themselves out."

President Nixon's economic speech last week in Los Angeles was a remarkable throwback in spirit and philosophy to that old laissez-faire doctrine. Said Mr. Nixon: "The key to fighting inflation is . . . the steadiness that stands firm against the clamor to take dramatic action jost to create an appearance of motion; the kind of steadiness that rejects gimmickry, and that gives the enormous creative forces of the marketplace a chance to work." Impatience, the President now believes, is the root of economic and financial evil.

The President is coupling the doctrine of steadiness with a rather mild dose of the "old-time religion" of budget halancing and hudget-cutting. Aware that this budgetary stringency may be terribly unpopular with special-interest groups. Mr. Nixon asks the support of "the one lobby we don't havean anti-inflation lobby." This should not be "2 lobby with plush Washington offices and high-paid officers," he said, hastily adding that of course be was not castigating any of the fine lobbylsts present in his Lcs Angeles audience or elsewhere around the nation.

And indeed, demonstrating that his newfound real for resisting the special-interest lobbies is by no meens excessive. Mr. Nixon followed his Los Angeles speech by quietly signing a bill to provide $2 billion in loan guarantees for producers of beef cattle and other livestock-a measure that will further intensity pressures on the nation's money and credit.

Mr. Nixon is now calling for voluntary action by the public to stop inflation. He called upon American consumers to save an extra 15 cents for every $10 they spend. This suggestion produced a quick flap among his advisers. One top White House economist urged the American people not to take the President literally, fest a higher savings rate and cut in consumption deepen the present business slump. Herbert Stein, the retiring chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. defended the President's statement. saying mysteriously: "We are not asking everyone to save an additional 1.5 per cent." Besides revealing the fecklessness of presidential efforts to jawbone consumers, this dispute demonstrates the oversimplification and inadequacy of the President's economic policy: the nation is certainly suffering from severe inflation, but not because consumer demand is excessive. On the contrary, the economy is in a slump, which further cuts in total consumer demand would only

To boost productivity and production, Mr. Nixon wants to reduce government regulation of business and, ominously, to "reevaluate the trade-off between increasing supplies and certain other objectives, such as improving tha environment and improving safety." Laissez-faire, with all its sweet 18th-century charm. Is still the favorite doctrine of much of hig business, except where bail-outs are concerned.

The only meaningful anti-inflationary element in the President's speech was his backing of the Federal Reserve's restrictive monetary policy, which has sent interest rates soaring and threatens to send the American economy into a more severe slump. endangering the whole world economy. An intellectually bankrupt administration seems to have no better course than to hope that with a little bit of luck this storm will soon blow itself out-just the way the last serious worldwide economic storm did not.

WASHINGTON-In what it did fice to get the files on one of not do, as in what it did, the House Judiciary Committee conveyed a reassuring sense of con-stitutional order. Even those most critical of the secret Cambodian bombing and of the President's tax returns may heve found reasons, in the debates, to accept that those wrongs were not proper grounds for impeachment. On Cambodia, the decisive argument was made succinctly by Rep. John Seiberling of Ohio. He detested the war and the bombing, Seiberling said; Kent State was in his district. But "we should when "other presidents have taken the same sort of action and . . . Congress bears a very deep measure of responsibility." Many members felt that Nixon had set "a very sorry example" in his tax returns, as Wiley Mayne of Iowa put it. But the prevailing view was expressed by Ray Thornton of Arkansas: "This committee is not a tax court or a criminal court." Its duty was to deal with offenses "affecting the security of our system of government."

Majestic Phrase

In rejecting those two articles. therefore, the committee was giving further content to the ma-Jestic phrase, "high crimes and misdemeanors." The offense must be the particular responsibility of the president accused. And it must rise above the level of common wrongdoing: Must be, as Hamilton Fish jr. of New York said, "an offense against the political process or the constitutional system of our country."

In the search for standards. members returned often to the clause of the Constitution requiring the president to "take care that the lews be faithfully executed." The point of the "take care" clause, as they saw it, was that it imposed an affirmative dutya duty breached if a president condoned or was indifferent to the corrupting lawlessness of his

Thus William Cohen of Maine said he had voted for Richard Nixon as "the best man to lead this country." But he would vote for impeachment. Cohen said, because the President had "by act or acquiescence allowed the rule of law and the Constitution to slip under the boots of indifference and arrogance and abuse."

"Yes." the American said. "this Israeli traffic is murder." "Oh, it's not the traffic," the former Soviet citizen replied. "I was sighing in amesement. I've been here for five months, but every so often I still sigh in amazement that I'm really in Israel." . .

The Right Word

Amazement seemed precisely the right word—at least to that American, who is me. As the Israelis themselves say repeated-ly, it seems a miracle that nearly 100,000 citizens of the most isolated society in the Western (or nearly Western) world are now living here. It evokes the image of a mass Houdini escape an impleusible feat, but here it is, indisputably real

It is difficult to imagine former Soviet citizens walking the streets of Jerusalem, Rome and New York the way they do now. To meet a man from Leningrad on a street corner in Tel Aviv must be something like running into a pretty girl in a large public men's room. Aren't you in the wrong place? Are you lost? Some of them are lost, and they make a tragic spectacle. I met several of them last month on the scruffy Mediterranean beach in Ostia, near Rome. They were Jews from Odessa, the Ukrainian seaport, who had spent two years in Israel but couldn't make a go of it. "You could live well in Odessa," ona of them said wistfully, "if you had money, and boy, did I have money!" Why had he left? He no longer really remembered, he said. But it seemed obvious that he had left to seek even bigger fortunes as have a large percentage of this nuexpected wave of emigrants from the Soviet Tmon.

Odessa is famous for its: thriving unofficial economy, many of whose former proprietors seem to be among the new emigrants. They made money in Odessa by hording scarce products, skimming profits from legitimate state businesses and other tricks, none of which are workable in a rational, Western style economy.

Happy Intellectuals

At the other extreme are the cosmopolitan and happy intellectuals who have managed to move comfortably into new lives: One is a professor at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, an Israeli citizen for more than three years, "Something very nice is happening to me," he said the other morning. "I'm beginning to forget my old life in the Soviet Union it's disappearing."

It is impossible to generalize about this heterogeneous group, bot most of them do share certain traits and certain tribulations:

The most obvious of these, not surprisingly, is a general sense that they are in someone else's country. The Israeli government causing he significant change in its spending plans.

Over the years, the conservative subcommittee, headed by Rep. George Manon of Texas, who is also chairman of the full Appropriations Committee, has largely established the basic size and shape of the defense budget that finally emerges from Congress. The subcommittee's recommendations are expected to be ratified by the full committee today with the defense appropriations bill going to the House floor Tuesday.

A 35 per cent cut in the defense budget falls within the pattern of congressional reductions in recent years. The Pentagon, in presenting its budget in January, expected a congressional reduction of about that size and finds ways to absorb it.

The result is that Congress is left free to boast about how it cut the defense budget, and the entagon Admits Pentagon's spending plans proceed unimpeded. This year, how-ever, the Pentagon's flexibility in sosorbing reductions has been restricted by an unexpectedly high rate of inflation, which is driving up personnel and weapons costs.

The Defense Department has already added $1.4 billion to its appropriations requests to cover increased costs in pay, pensions and fuel. Detense officials expect that it will be necessary to reque additional funds, but the White House Office of Management and Bodget is determined to hold the department to its original budget.

The strict manufacturing and assembly standards are expected to raise the aggregate costs of diagnostic X-rays by about $20 million a year, all of which wilt probably be passed on to the consumer. The net saving in medical costs would still be 5150 million a year, according to an FDA an-

Gain Is Cited On Infertility Drug for Men

Two U.S. Scientists Break Hormone Down

By Stuart Auerbach

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (WF).— Two Los Angeles scientists think they are on the track of a chemical way to make men infertile. They believe that their discovery of the chemical structure of the complex hormone that is responsible for the production of sperm can lead to a new method of contraception—an injection that would stop the body from making sperm. But, even if it works, the discovery would fall short of being the soulvalent for men of the present day birth-control pill for women. Most likely, its effects would be irreversible, a sort of chemical vasectomy, instead of temporarily working for a specified period of time the way the pill does.

That would limit its usefulness to men who have decided that they no longer want to father children.

5-Year Wait In any case, the two scientists said it would be at least five years before they knew if their discorthe Journal of Clinical Endocrinology and Metabolism-will have any application for contracep-

As a first step, doctors Albert Parlow and Basider Shome of Harbor General Hospital and the University of California at Los Angeles said they have just started animal studies to see if the chemical structure of folliclestimulating hormone (FSH) could he used as a contraceptive.

FSH is the last of the seven hormones secreted by the pituitary gland in the base of the brain whose structure has been unraveled by scientists. It is also the most complex of the seven.

Dr. Parlow explained in a telephone interview that he and Dr. Shome hope to use their new knowledge of the hormone to create a vaccine made from the FSH of animals such as sheep, cows and pigs. This vaccine would be injected into men to trigger their bodies' defense mechanisms against foreign substances.

LH and FSH While being different enough to trigger the defense mechanism, Dr. Parlow said, the vaccine made from animal PSH will be similar enough to human FSH so that the defense mechanism will also destroy it.

PSH is also involved in female fertility. But in men, it is responsible only for the production of sperm, while another pituitary hormone, leutinizing hormone LH1, is involved in the manufacture of sex hormones. In women, bowever, LH and FSH have to work together for both the production of eggs and the manofacture of sex hormones.

FSH from natural sources is very expensive and is a key in-gredient in fertility pills for women who are having trouble concelving children.

Now that they know the chemial structure of FSH, scientists can synthesize it so a more plenti-ful supply will be available at a lower price, Dr. Parlow said.

16 Brands of Contraceptives Are Selling Well Birth Control in Spain Still Quiet, But Easier

By Mike Booth

MADRID (IHT).—Article 416 of the Spanish penal code says. They will be punished with arrest and fine . . . those who manufacture, offer for sale or use medications, substances, objects, instru-ments, apparatus, means or procedures capable of provoking or facilitating abor-tion or preventing conception. ... Legal-iy, contraception in Spain is linked with abortion and is banned.

However, according to a Madrid gynecologist, in practice the law is not applied and attitudes toward birth control are rapidly changing. "Theoretically, Article 418 could be applied in hundreds of thou-sands of cases today," he says, "but, that I know of the law has not been invoked in

"There are at least 16 brands of con-traceptive pills which are made in Spain," he adds, "and they are sold by the millions. Of course, they are ostensibly not contraceptives but medication for dealing with uterine bleeding or regulating the menstrual cycle."

Ireland, Spain and Portugal are the only countries in Europe to continue to prohibit birth control

Various Choices

In Spain, says the doctor, the prescrip-tion of the pill is handled discreetly be-tween doctor and patient. Among the various pills available here are ones made under American and German patents em-bracing the most advanced medical tech-nology. Many of them fall into the lowlevel estrogen category, considered safe by the Dunlop Committee in England.

under medical pretenses, intrauterine (IUDs) devices are not in general use in Spain. This is ironic since a Spanish firm, Medhosa, has developed what is said to be the most efficient IUD yet, an "anchor" design which is said to be virtually expulsion proof. Each box which leaves the Barcelona factory is labeled: "For Export Only."

Active opposition to contraception in Spain comes not from the government nor the church but from individual priests and doctors who find their most accommodating outlet in the sensationalist press. Such pulp magazines as Personas and Diez Minutos sometimes tab the coroers of their pages with the question: "La Pildora—Cancer?"

In spite of Pope Paul's recent reaffirma-tion of the Catholic Church's stand on birth control, many modern Spanish priests are privately condoning, even counseling use of contraceptives, especially in special circumstances, such as when pregnancy might endanger a woman's health. "I occasionally have patients come to me with notes from a priest 'authorizing' birth control measures," says the doctor.

There are many aspects to this generally freer atmosphe.e regarding sexual matters in Spain these days," he adds. "To-day many Spanish doctors will undertake tubal ligatures, on their own responsibility after a woman's third or fourth Caesarean section, when it is clear that further pregnancies would be dangerous for her.

of the medical profession here, as well as by the clergy," the doctor added. He went on to say that "interrupted coites was the generally accepted method of birth control for years."

New attitudes are even filtering into institutions, according to the doctor. "Recently I was asked to give my annual sexeducation lecture to teen-aged girls in a Catholic school," he says. "I reviewed beforehand with the director the slides I planned to show. I expressed a little hesitation myself about some of the material, but the school director insisted that I feel completely free to include anything I felt relevant."

"As with most other social trends," says the doctor, "birth control here took root in the cities. It is now reaching slowly into the villages but a massive re-education can be fully accepted. Keep in mind that in Spain, when women go to an appointment with a gynecologist, they are generally accompanied by their mothers. And in the villages the whole subject of sexuality is still shrouded in mystery and guilt. Of course, legalization would speed matters up, and I fully expect this to hap-pen sooner than many people think."

Meanwhile, Spain continues to be the land of large families. The government gives nominal tax breaks and public-transport discounts to families with more than four children and once a year presents the national hirth prize to the country's larg-est family. This year's winners, an Almeria couple, have 19 living children. They were received personally by Generalissimo Prancisco Franco and given a diploma and

2 Bruges Shows: Classic Era, Today's Youth

"Abortions, on the other hand, are considered taboo by most responsible members

By Rona Dobson

BRUGES, Belgium (IRT).-Two exhibitions on view in Brages underscore the character of this historic city.

One, in the medieval core of the town, features 15th to 18th-century paintings by Flemish and Dutch artists. The other is the Bruges Triennale, a collective show of works by young Belgians in the modern outskirts of the city.

The old paintings come from the Czech collection of Flemish and Dutch works in Prague—the museum there is undergoing rennyation, hence the loan exhibition to the Bruges Groeninge Museum.

Among the works: two importent triptychs by Dutch artist Geertgen Sint Jans and Flemish artist Joos van Cleve, originally from the collection of Leopold II Emperor of Austria, King of Bobemia and conqueror of the Netherlands. Van Cleve's style is the traditional Flemish primitive approach to religious themes with the three kings in sumptious dress presenting gifts in a classical pillared ruin with nothing of Bethlehem about it. St. Jerome looks on from the wings, bat slung attendant lion just visible beside him. Geertgen Sint Janes (his name means "Little Gerrit who lives near St. John's Church") may buve studied in Bruges around 1475, but he was a Hollander born and bred. He places the same scene in a real stable without frills, the background filled with people and horses in movement, a lively miniature world with subtle and advanced touches of sophistication in the grouping of his figures.

The paintings in the Bruges museums are separated into Flemish and Dutch sections, con-forming to the show's title, "1450 to 1750" by opening with a mid-15th century version of the masterpainting, "The Virgin on Her Deathbed," by one of Hugo van der Goes's disciples and closing with an Amsterdam flower paint-ing by Rachel Ruysch who died in 1750.

Ruysch

In ber own time much admired, Ruysch has slipped into obscurity but the beautiful little composition of flowers and fruits from Prague, painted when she was 18, should help revive her reputation.

There are village carnivals and winter stating scenes; still lifes -a table scene with oysters, bread, wine by the 16th-century Antwerp painter, Osias Beert, proves that artists then appredated the good life. There are copies of Peter Breugel's works by his son Peter; an unusual Jan Steen showing 17th-century musical instruments. . Many of the works from Prague have scrupulously qualified attri-butions with stern judgments by classifier-critics. But whether they are by pupils or masters, these paintings can be enjoyed un-reservedly, giving as they do an overview of three centuries of artistic life.

That the same strain of artistic expression is still alive in Belgium is clear at the Triennale. Today's preoccupations with objects in full dimension, with literary con-cepts, with macabre allegories and with participation by the public bave taken over from the gently

reverent religious themes, the studied portraits and mythical

But tranquil interiors, still lifes, green countryside still surface, though transformed by contemporary eyes. ## Japan, Arabia Set $3 Billion Joint Project

Petrochemical Plants To Be Ready by 1980

From Wise Disputches TOKYO, Aug. 1.-The Mitsubishi industrial group announced today an agreement with Saudi Arabia's state-run Petroleum & Mioeral Corp. (Petromin: to build a $3 billion petrochemical com-plex in the kingdom by 1980

The project, including an oil refinery, a methanil plant and an ethylene center, will be put up at Al Jubayi on the Persiao Gulf coast and owned jointly by Saudi Arabia and the Japanese group, Mitsubishi Corp. speaking for the group, said it boped to seek financing from Saudi Arabia for the giant project but added that no negotiations have yet taken place with Petromin Mitsubishi said that it is studying the possibility of obtaining "oil dollars" to help finance its share of the project.

Mitsubishi officials said that they have not yet asked Japan's government-spontored Exportimport Bank to provide funds lur the project, so it is not known how much capital can be obtained from that low-cost source, Securing enough funds from the Ex-Ini Bank is expected to be difficult because of the bank's financing limitations and because of Japan's balance-of-payments problems,

The officials sai, that talks aimed at establishing the "basic conditions" for the joint venture, expected to be established next year, are in progress.

The Japanese hope to get an indication during the course of these discussions of how much financing they might be able to obtain Within Saudi Arabia, "As far as we know, Saudi Arabia's willingness to lend us money depends on our ability and entpusiasm to carry out these projects," one Mitsubishi official Meanwhile, the government may attempt to borrow dollars from off-producing nations, either directly or by securing medlum or long-term loans from U.S. banks that have received "off dollar" deposits, Tadashi Sasaki, governor of the Bank of Japan, said today. In view of the difficulties that Japanese banks are having in bicreasing Eurodollar borrowings and rolling over existing loans. many Japanese officials are becountry's ability to finance its balance - of - payments deficits through "commercial" channels is reaching a limit.

Inflation Bloats U.S. Profits 26%

NEW YORK, Aug. 1 'AP-DJ .-- U.S. ludustry's profits rose in the second quarter, but they were bloated considerably by raging inflation, which also is obscuring the outlook for the "real" performance of business in the third quarter and second half.

A Wall Street Journal tabulation of 627 companies shows that after-tax earnings increused 25.6 per cent from the second period of 1972, compared with a year-to-year rise of 16.4 per cent in the first quarter. Just how much of the second quarter gain is due to inflation rather than improved industry performance is not clear. but many economists agree the impact is sub-

The government's inflation measures indicate that profits were under pressure in the second The wholesale price index, which reflects industry's costs of materials, rose in the second quarter at an annual rate of nearly 12 per cent. Companies attempted to offset this when price controls were lifted at the end of April by raising their own prices, but they did not succeed completely. The consumer price index, rose at an annual rate of 10.8 per ceut during the quarter.

Auto Earnings Poor, Prices Up

Auto makers for instance, heaped several price increases onto their 1974 models during the period, but the effect on profits was unly to keep poor earnings from being horrible. General Motors reported a 62 per ceut drop in profit, which was not as bad as the 85 per cent plunge us the first quarter but still was the giant company : worst second period in 13 years.

Third-quarter profits will depend on a variety of special circumstances at the auto companies, including their ability to hold down costs of the traditional model change-over in production plauts. After thot, profits will hinge on the pace of new-car sales to inflation-weary onvers.

By contrast, the steelmakers are optimizing for continued profit kuprovement in the third quarter and second half, a view shared by several malvars. "At this date, we see no easing un sreel demand," says Frederick Jaicks, chairman of Inland Steel.

Still, the pare of inflation worries the stork-makers. Inland Steel said in a letter to us shareholders that if it adjusted for inflation by liguring its 1974 earnings to terms of 1963 dollars, its first half net of $3.60 a share would be only $2.65-less than the $2.74 the company artually earned in the first half of 1968. Inventory Gains Help Oil Firms

Oil-company earnings jumped 81.9 per cent in the second quarter, but most of the bly concerns rited large crude-oil inventory gains as a major factor contributing to the profit surge. These resulted from the sale of crude that the companies previously purchased at substantially lower prices. Now, they say, their low-cost in-ventories are depleted and are being replaced with high-cost crude. It world crude prices later begin to tall, as some analysts predict, the inventory gains of past quarters could become inventory losses.

Profit marcins overseas-especially in Europere being squeezed for the major firms. Also, the companies say that if the dollar continues to strengthen as it has in recent weeks, foreign carnings as reported in dollars would be affected

Chemical producers sharp earnings gains are likely to coutmue in the second half. Uodertailed inventories, as a result of inflation, are thating profit figures, "Real" profits also have coined sharply however, partly because huge price increases have videned profit marguis. For time producers, the impact of recent price boosts should be even greater in the second ball, when all chemicals will be free of price controls. Furthermore demand continues to exceed supply ter most major chemicals.

Paper Companies See Record Profits

Pulp and paper companies earnings should gain significantly in the second half, but the extent to which inflation and the removal of price controis will affect profits is uncertain. Most paper companies expect record earnings for the year. Machine-tool makers continue to receive orders at a high rate, so third-quarter shipments will continue well above year-ago revels practically guaranteeing profit unprovement. However, raploly rising costs have prevented the industry frem being as problable as it might be during a strong period in the industrial investment cycle. Building-products suppliers expect higher carnings in the second half, but concede that the expected gains will be due largely to higher prices and other factors, not better business. Electrical-equipment companies second-light outlook grows darker as high interest rates force utilities to delay construction plans and thus postpone or cancel orders for power-generation equipment. Inflation as also boosting costs faster than prices can be raised in the compensive

Chrysler Shelres Subcompact

Chrysler's on-again, off-again plans to build a subcompact car in the United States are off, again. Chairman Lynn Townsend says Chrysler has decided against offering a domestic subcompact car for the 1977 model year. Earlier this year. Chrysler said it nught introduce such a car in 1977. Chrysler has wavered on whether to build a domestic subcompatt car since General Motors and Ford took the plunge with their Vega and Pinto models in 1970. Chrysler has at various times ousily worked out designs and engineering plans only to stop because of the eostiv commitments for tooling and manufacturing capacity. Each time Chrysler pushed its subcompact car plans back on the shelf, officials defended the action on the ground that the company was already making strides in the smail-car market with its larger, compact-sized Dooge Darts and Plymouth Veliants and that a huge investment in a smaller model would not be justified. The company now says that sixmonth sales figures show "the subcompact market since January has been tailing off badiy."

Kansai Asks for New Generator

Kansai Electric Power Co. of Japan has asked Westinghouse Electric Corp. to replace a malfunctioning steam generator connected to a 350,000-kilowatt nuclear generating unit at its Mihama power plant. The company says it expects Westinghouse to bear the cost of replacement under the terms of the original purchase contract. Earlier, the power producer had asked Westinghouse to redesign the steam generator. saving a decision on replacement had not been reached. Last week. Combustion Engineering Co., the onaker of the unit in question, said it recommended some time ago that Kansai rhana operating procedures at the plant which would permit continued operation of the original steam generator. Kansai says the steam generator has malfunctioned four times since the reactor began

Sanyo Holds to Profit Forecast

Despite some pessimism about the possible unpart of a sharp increase in labor and raw material costs. Sanyo Electric Co. of Japan has left uochanged its initial forecast of around 3 billion yen ($10 million) ner profit for the hall year ending Nov. 30. This would be unchanged from the preceding half but down from 3.324 billion yen earned a year earlier, says managing director Yoshifumi Niyamoto, Strong demand for refrigerators, air conditioners and stereo setare expected to help prevent a further decline in net profit, but he concedes that the full inpact of a 35 per cent wage increase granted this spring and higher ran material costs will prove troublesome. He says it is difficult to boost prices fully to absorb higher raw material costs. partly because of government policies and pertially because of competition.

World Bank Lifts Its Lending Rate To 8 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (AP-DJ).—The World Bank announced today it is increasing its lending rate to 8 per cent for all future

The action, recommended by Rohert McNamara, president of the international lending agency, was approved by the bank's executive directors.

They also agreed to transfer s100 million of World Bank earnings to the International Development Association (IDA), the ment Association (IDA) the hank's "soft loan" affiliate. The World Bank's lending rate has been 7 1/4 per cent for about two years. The bank's own borrowings were at an average rate of 7.51 per cent in the fiscal year ending June 30, but the hank has heen required to pay 8 per cent on some of its recent bor-rowings in Middle East countries.

Japan Seen Depositing Dollars With Banks TOKYO. Aug. 1 (Reuters) .-

Local banking sources said today the Finance Ministry informed Japanese banks it would deposit additional dollars with them tomorrow to ease the pressure of their borrowings from the Eurodollsr market.

The sources said the amount was expected to be more than $200 million, but the deposits would be for less than one month. During July, the ministry deposited an estimated $450 million for four-month periods with the banks.

Morocco Jails Three

For Counterfeiting CASABLANCA, Morocco, Aug. 1 (Reuters).—Two Spaniards and an American resident in Morocco have been jailed for making counterfelt napoleons—a 20-franc gold piece. Emanuel Puetar, 51, was sentenced to five years. Marco Polo, 59, and Jean-Pierre Johns, 49, born in Miami, got three years each. The regional tribunal here also fined the three jointly one million dirhams (about $238,000).

Eurodollar Borrowings WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (Reuters .- Liabilities of U.S. commercial banks to their foreign branches rose $80 milion to 54.663 billion in the week ended July 24, the Federal Reserve reported yesterday. This was $2.571 billion higher than the level for Eurodolair borrowings in the year-ago week.

Markets Closed All banks and financial markeis were closed Thursday in Switzerland for a holiday.

EMPEROR OF CHINA

Self-Portrait of K'ang-hsi By Jonathan D. Spence. Alfred A. Knopf. 218 pp. $6.9.

Reviewed by Theodore Shabad

Thought, as China's Communist doctrine is officially called, it is refreshing to read the thoughts of one of Chatman Mao's illustrious predecessors, K'ang-ini, who ruled China as the second emperor of the Manchii dynasty from 1661 to 1722. The leader of a flourishing and stable kingdom and a patron of the sciences, arts and letters, K'ang-hsi, like most Chinese emperors, has been hidden from us behind the screen of official histories and formal edicts issued in his name. Private thoughts and attitudes rarely found expression in stereotyped utterances. In an unusual book, Jorathan Spence, a professor of Chinese history at Yale, now reveals one of China's most important rulers as a human being, talking about his attitudes and values in his OWD. WORDS.

As both a feat of scholarship and a literary achievement, "Emperor of China" is a tour de force. Delving through a vast body of historical source materials, letters, edicts and biographies relating to K'ang-hat's reign, Prof. Spence has constructed a self-portraft of the emperor by piecing together personal expressions on a wide variety of subjects into a coherent whole. The result is such a realistic. seemingly autobiographical memoir that this reader, at least, had to remind himself that this was a reconstructed, not an original, account. The genre is not a new one. It was done successfully in a number of fine historical studies, notably the "Memoirs of Hadrian," the Roman emperor, by the French writer Marguerite Yourcenar. However, while previous authors sought to fill gaps with fictionalized material, Prof. Spence attempted to limit him; self entirely to the words of his subject as they were recorded, selecting phrases, sentences and paragraphs that he felt represented K'ang-hai's views.

To give coherence to the scattered and fragmentary material, the author organized bis snippets around five basic themes. The first part of the book recounts the emperor's travels across China, his bunting expeditions and the campaigns in which he participated. Another category of comments is grouped around purely governmental aspects of K'ang-bai's reign, his views on the nation's economy, the ciuca-tional structure and the legal code. A third classification encompasses his search for knowledge and focuses on Kang-hai's dealings with European Jesuit priests, who brought not only their religion to China, but also Western science, including mathemattes, geography and astron-ony. A fourth section, deeply personal, is titled "Growing Old" and portrays the emperor's awareness of his physical decline and his interest in diet. illness and medicine. The final themat-

South opened with two hearts. This was a specialized opening showing typically, an opening bid with four spades and five hearts a hand that is difficult to manage in standard methods.

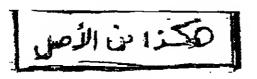

Two hearts ended the auction, and West led the diamond queen, He was using Rusinow leads, in which the second of touching honors is required, so the queen promised the king.

East dropped the eight, and South made a most unusual move: he dropped the four with-out a second's thought. Holding such a combination it is normal to win, thus ensuring a second trick with the jack and ten.

No declarer would duck holding both are and jack, West thought, so he naturally led another diamond into the jaws of South's ace-jack. #### Cepeda Returns, This Time at K.C.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 1 (UPI).-The Kansas City Royals reported the acquisition yesterday of Orlando Cepeda, who hit 289 last season for the Boston Red Sox as a designated hitter while plagued by a knee aliment. Cepeda, 86, became a free agent when he was released by Boston in March. The Red Sox had used him exclusively as a designated hitter. He ranked second among all designated hitters in RBIs, homers, doubles, hits and at-hats. He hit 20 homers and drove in 88 runs.

Fresh from a month and a haif with Yucatan in the Mexican League, Cepeda says his knee is much less a problem this year. He hit four homers and drove in 18 runs for Yucatan through July 27.

At 84, Ol' Casey Is Still a Study in Stengelese

By John Hall

GLENDALE, Calif., Aug. 1 .- He answered the phone on the first ring. The voice was strong and vibrant, with that same old magnificent rasp and growl.

"Dammit, young man," he said, "I'll tell you a few things, then you can ask me a few questions if you've got the breath, and I'm on my way to Dallas as soon as I pack my bag ... I'm leaving right away, and it's serious and I feel very bad about Del Webb and Dan Topping as they was always splendid to me ...

"No, no... I'm not having a birthday party at home this year. I told you I'm on my way to Dallas where one of my players is a doctor and owns the club and another, Mr. Martin, if you please, tra la, is the manager, and I'll keep right on going for an oldtimers' gama in Shea. home of the Amazin's and even the Yankees now, and then 1've got to be at the hall of fame for the induction of Mantle and Ford, who was both slways pretty good for me and where Dimag is, and Williams and I went into together back in 1966 ...

"Banking and baseball are both red hot in this country, and that's my business and I'm going to speak at a bankers convention in New York." The squire of Glendale, baseball's patriarch, the former dental student and the hall of fame player and manager, of course, are all the same person-Charles Dillon Stengel, Ol' Casey.

To borrow a bit of his ageless and endiess Stengelese, Casey turned 84 Tuesday, since he was born July 30, 1890. in Kansas City. Mo., where he once paid $1.50 a month to study dentistry but eave it up because he was lefthanded and got only 75 cents to pull a tooth, and besides. he played for the Brooklyn Dodgers. Pittshurgh Pirates, New York Glants and Boston Braves as a joung man and hit an inside-the-park bomer in the world series before managing the Yankees to all those pennants and discovering the Mets, which isn't so bad for a southpaw outflelder living in Glendaie, Stengel spoke from the den of his twostory, white stucco bome where he and his wife. Edna, have fived for more than three decades.

Casey said that no birthday party was planned because Edna has been "not ieeling too good" and they'll make up for

"I've got 20 or 30 pictures on the wall right behind me here of Edna and me eating dinner to England and San Francisco and, yes, with you baseball writers in Beverly Hills, and we've been tegether, and I'm not gonna go dancing

With or without tape recorder, it has always been impossible to capture Stengelese in print. The tortured syntax needs his personal delivery for one to appreciate the pure beauty.

Usually, though, there is a point lurking somewhere between the twists and turns. After heing wished happy hirthday, be talked for an hour, and quit, danmit, knocking the Dougers.
"Who's in front?" be shouted, "It's amazing they got out there so far, and who's everybody talking about just because they're losing a few, and who's drawing the big crowds and making me fast talk about basehall and go to games? "The Dodgers are wonderful, terrific. Yes, there's a little trouble... But they got the cleanest hall park, cleanest hot dogs and cleanest sheets... It's so wonderful. "And Mr. Mike Marshall, You know he knows bow to pitch, and you know he can field a hunt, and you know be can throw the ball into centerfield, and how many can pitch at the end of a game like Toni Seaver, who struck out the last 10 Padres... Isn't it terrible? Mr. Marshall makes a mistake and how many times has he handled the ball? A lot more chances than some outfleiders, who

The recent deaths of Wehh and Top ping, who owned the Yankees during Stengel's golden managerial run of 10 pennants and seven world series, were a jolt to him.

Stergel said that Wehb and Topping set up an annuity for him during that time that has matured to more than $150,000.

"They did terrific things for mc. and $150,000 ain't hay if you can find the money, and it's a shame I waited until they passed away to ever mention it. They were good men, he said.

"Listen, young man, dammit, teli everybody Oi' Casey is rolling along. Playing good is the solution ... That's the biggest point... I'm dressing more immaculate these days. My hair is longer, my trousers tighter, tra ia, and I wear standup ties and wide ties. I'm no comedian. And everything is terrific. Isn't it

Some things don't change, and happy birthday, Casey, and many more, and haseball should discover another leftbanded dentist in Kansas City before It's too late, which it may already be, but the game goes on, and that's the main thing, and 84 is bardly a day, tra la, even if you spend it in Dalias, if you get what I mean, which could be worse.

NFL Strike Evokes Nostalgia and Bitterness in Veterans

never rim after it."

By Dave Anderson NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Before his induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame last week, Bill George, once the middle linebacker of the Chicago Bears, was visiting with George Halas, the Bears' owner. During the conversatoin, Bill George mentioned casually that he wished two of his teammates, Doug Atkins and Fred Williams, were going to Canton Ohio, with him for the ceremony.

"They were great," the old linebacker said. "They steered all those guys with the ball to where I looked good making the tackle." "If you want Atkins and Williams at the induction," Halas sald, "you tell them to get there and send me the bill for the expenses. The morel of the offer is that Ralas, notorious for the moths in his wallet when negotiating salaries with those players, will spend millions—well, hundreds anyway-for tribute, but not a cent for defense. Nostalgia often affects old owners that way, but not young players. At the Hell of Fame last Saturday, another dimension of the players' strike developed. Memhers of the National Football League Players Association. picketing the game between the alleged Buffalo Bills and the alleged St. Louis Cardinals, were picketed by members of the NFL Alumni Association, the oldtimers who built the game but who are ineligible for pensions.

There are only 500 oldtimers involved. They could do it easily." The oldtimers don't blame the current players, whom they think are uninformed. They blamed Ed

Garvey, the players association executive director. They claim that Garvey has insulated the players from communication with the oidtimers. Several months ago, when Hart phoned Bill Curry, the players association presi-dent declined to meet with the alumni president "on the advice of counsel." When both groups convened in Las Vegas simultaneously last year, the oldtimers contend that Garvey ordered the players there not to talk to them. Not long ago the oldtimers asked that their representatives attend

Another Recipient Another player of that era. Wee Willie Wilken, a huge tackle with the Redskins, was a recipient of the alumni fund. He developed concer. The alumui helped him get into a veterans hospital in San Francisco for cobait treatments. At the time he was supposed to have had six months to live. But about a year later, he phoned Castiglia to ask a favor. He wanted to attend an aiumni convention.

"You're supposed to be dead by now." Castiglia said. "But," said Wee Willie, "You're keeping me alive."

Wee Willie died not long ago, but Castigha says proudly, "We kept him alive for three years." Another alumnus, stricken with lateral sclerosis, began to receive monthly payments recently from the alumni fund, to which the owners have contributed $270,000 in the last five years, compared to zilch from the current players. "He told me." Castiglia says, "This makes playing worth-while." Some of today's players

Iceland's Cod War: A Fight for Survival

By Waverley Root

PARIS (IET).—The International Court of Justice at The Hagne has ruled that Iceland cannot exclude other nations from taking fish-in practice, this means cod-more than 12 miles beyond its coastline (IHT, July 26); but Iceland does not recognize the court's jurisdiction in this matter, so the scene has been set for another cod war.

History is used to them. Rivalry for the taking of that important food fish, the cod, has erupted into "wars" any number of times during the thousand years, at least that the cod bas been an internationally traded fish: cod played a role in the American Revolution and its sequel, the War of 1812 (IRT, July 9).

The protagonists in the Icelandic cod war of the last two decades have been Iceland and Great Britain, for historic and geographical reasons; in the case just terminated, West Germany had joined Britain as a plaintiff, but the country most responsible for the bitterness of the present struggle remained on the sidelines—the Soviet Union.

The Hague court touched on the circumstance which has most aroused Iceland lately, the necessity for conserving a fish which is rapidly disappearing, but no solution has been found. It is Soviet trawlers which have been most damaging to the cod fisheries because they arefrom the short-term point of view-the most efficient, which means-from the long-term point of view—the most waste-

The danger to the cod as a species began when trawlers started using nets of a fine mesh which not only took 70 per cent of the mature fish, but also began picking up young, immature fish. And the latest Soviet trawlers, which are the most ruthless, are now so disastrously efficient that they sweep the sea floor clean (cod are bottom feeders), leaving almost no life behind

Some fish - salmon, for instance spawn only once, and then die. Cod spawn every year-or used to. Since the trawlers became more efficient, cod in many areas no longer have a chance to spawn more than once in their lifetimes. This alone would be sufficient to reduce the cod population appreciably. But now that smaller fish are being taken, possibly a majority of cod never reach spawning age Rt all. Cod are slow growers. It takes them from two to four years to mature, and as they are by then often as much as

2 feet long, they are swept up by modern trawlers before they have produced eggs. The result has already been bitterly felt on the Newfoundland Grand Banks. once the great cod fishery of the world, which an icthyologist has lately described as "now nearly deserted." Passing Georges Bank off the coast of Massachusetts last October, I saw a fleet of Soviet trawlers engaging in ravaging its fish life too. The last stands of the cod are the waters around Greenland and Iceland. It is a question today of how many years it will hold out. If it is predictable that Iceland will not accept the verdict of the World Court, it is because for Iceland the cod fisheries are a matter of life and death. Cod is virtually the island's only resource. Even tourism, a lifesaver for some other countries with little else to depend on can with difficulty be developed beyond its present rather limited extent, because of the geographic and climatic peculiarities of the country.

Before the worldwide lowering of temperatures which began about the year 1000 and culminated in the Little Ice Age of the 14th century, Iceland grew wheat; but since then this has not been feasible and the sole important food of the island has been the cod, a fish which thrives in cold water, the colder the better. If the cod goes too, Iceland will be parperized.

It is consciousness of this fact that has made Iceland uncompromising about the cod. In self-defense, for the immediate future the country seeks to preserve for itself the major share of the fish in adjacent waters. For the more distant future, Iceland is attempting to establish its own authority over the fishing practices in those waters, for the conservation of the cod since no international organization seems able to protect it.

It was when Iceland discovered, two decades ago, that it was netting only 50 per cent of the fish taken in what it considered its own waters that the country announced the extension of its territorial waters from three miles beyond its coasts to 12 miles. This led to the first modern, open cod war with the British. These are the traditional British fishing grounds. The British have been operating there for more than 400 years. The dispute over the shift from a three-mile to a 12-mile limit was marked by acts of violence on both sides and was finally by a compromise agreement in

became desperate. Sept. 1, 1972, it announced the extension of its territorial waters from 12 to 50 miles. The fat was in the fire again, The Common Market offered to reduce its tariffs on Icelandic fish by 50 per cent if Iceland would stick to the 13-mile limit, but Iceland refused, on the theory that 50 per cent of nothing is nothing, and nothing was precisely what the cod take would become if unrestricted fishing

Why 50 miles? Because 50 miles is almost exactly the distance of the circle formed around Iceland by its continental shelf, if an island can be said to have a continental shelf-call it the 1,300-foot isobath if you prefer. This covers virtually all the cod-inhabited area.

If Iceland is likely to turn a deaf ear to the ruling of the Hague Court, Brit-ain, strengthened by its decision, can be expected to return to the attack. Not only have the British been fishing these waters for centuries but the fish taken there are an important factor in the British economy too, which does not depend as exclusively as Iceland on the cod, but is not strong enough in other sectors to be able to give anything away.

Britain has been netting 160,000 tons of fish a year from what Iceland now defines as its waters; this represents 60 per cent of the total take of all British ships fishing outside of Britain's own territorial waters. It is not to be expected that Britain will abandon this

Is there any solution? The only likely direction seems to be that of international agreement on fishing methods which will assure the reproduction of the codmethods by which everybody must abide, including fishermen from countries distant from the cod fisheries, like the Soviet Union and Japan. In the light of the reaction of these two countries to attempts to save whales from extinction, it would take an optimist to expect success in preserving the cod. The prospect as of now would seem to be mething like: In five years, no whales;

PEOPLE: Agnew Gets O.K. for a Gun

Former Vice-President Spire Agnew-now in Greece on a business trip-has received special government permission to own s gun. Approval came Wednesday from the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacto and Firearms and was necessary because of Agnew's status as a convicted felon. In seeking permission Agnew claimed that he had seen trespassers on his property and had been threaten-The firearms bureau said that Agnew would be allowed to own any kind of weapon that is legal in the United States. (Agnew resigned his office and pleaded no contest to a tax evasion charge last October. He was fined $10,000 and give three years of unsupervised probation.)
